World Down Syndrome Day

Tuesday, March 21, 2017, is the 12th anniversary of World Down Syndrome Day. According to the international website, it is intended “to help raise awareness of what Down syndrome is, what it means to have Down syndrome, and how people with Down syndrome play a vital role in our lives and communities.”

On their website, as of early January, they list 28 World Down Syndrome Day celebrations in the US and 8 in Canada.

Locally, the Flower City Down Syndrome Network is celebrating at Bill Gray’s on Jefferson Road on March 21 from 5PM – 8 PM. It’s a party for the Rochester community. There will be a free photo booth and a magician. Print the flyer from their website and a family member with Down syndrome will get a free burger or ice cream. ## Progress! Yes!

Fisher-Price has a commercial featuring two-year-old Lili Boglarka Havasi from Budapest (left, from the NY Times story). Additionally, a young man named Asher will begin his modeling career at 15 months with the OshKosh children’s clothing line. Both children have Down syndrome. They represent another step forward in using models and actors with Down syndrome.

Katie Driscoll, who is herself the mother of a child with Down syndrome, spearheaded a group called Changing the Face of Beauty which intended to encourage retailers to commit to using models with disabilities in their advertising. Their goal was to find 15 retailers who would commit. They found 100.

Driscoll said, “We focus on what a smart business decision it is to include people with disabilities in advertisements. You are essentially leaving a lot of money on the table, otherwise.”

Progress? Not in France!

In France, young people with Down syndrome caused a video to be banned from French airwaves. What horrible thing had they done? They had smiled on camera. They were obviously happy and so were their mothers. They were shown on camera explaining the many ways in which their lives were happy and rewarding.

Apparently, their smiles might “disturb the conscience” of women who had aborted babies with Down syndrome, might lead them to think that they had perhaps made a bad choice. The French media culture frowns upon not only “disturbing” a woman about a past abortion, but also attempting to influence her in any way up front as she decides whether or not to terminate her child’s life.

If you would like to see the wonderful, encouraging video “Dear Future Mom,” go to <https://youtu.be/Ju-q4OnBtNU> (Two-hanky alert!)

The two-child movement in India

According to the Population Research Institute (PRI) the state of Assam in northeast India seems prepared to follow China's two-child policy, except that it would only apply to government employees. Candidates for local or district offices will not be allowed to have more than two children, and an official in office who has a third child will lose his or her job. If this measure passes, it will be the eighth state to adopt such a population policy. (Assam is the farthest east orange-colored state on the map.)

PRI notes, "every state with a two-child policy is below replacement fertility." India's replacement fertility rate is 2.25 (see chart and map at right). The top three categories, beginning with dark red, show areas below replacement value; the two lighter areas are at or above replacement value. Population decreases will not improve economic problems and population control measures will cause increased social dislocations. They will also cause an increase in sex-selective abortions, as government workers struggle to save their jobs.

The map, in a larger scale, and the original article are available at www.pop.org/content/indian-state-proposes-two-child-limit-government-employees?bblinkid=35624169&bbemailid=3000412&bbejrid=209230006

Who's Armenia?

Many pro-lifers would have no difficulty naming India, China, and Japan as countries with wild population imbalances due to sex-selective abortion.

However, there's another, smaller player joining them: Armenia. The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) warns that sex-selective abortions discriminating against baby girls has skewed the ratio of male to female births from the normal 102 - 106 male births versus 100 female births to the unnatural ratio of 114/100 male/female births.

This 2012 data prompted UNFPA's representative Garik Hayrapetyan to say, "In 10 to 20 years, we will face a shortage of women and — combined with a dramatic decline in fertility rates — that will lead to a serious demographic crisis."

The government would like to restrict sex-selective abortions, but women's rights groups in the country are resisting. Sex selective abortion is also rampant in the neighboring country Azerbaijan, with which Armenia is in a territorial dispute. According to the Guardian, in Azerbaijan "53 percent of newborn children were boys in the first quarter of 2016." <http://guardian.ng/news/armenia-raises-alarm-as-abortions-of-girls-skew-population/>

Who broke the baby?

That's what Jean Garton's son asked her.

Jean came to the pro-life side relatively late in life after stubbornly digging into the facts on both sides of the issue. She found out that everything the other side said was false. She eventually wrote her book "Who Broke the Baby?" in which she debunked those claims.

The title of the book originated in the question posed by her son. She had been projecting slides onto the wall late one night as she prepared for a talk at a medical school the next day, slides of abortions.

She says, "...my youngest child, then a sleepy three-year old, unexpectedly entered the room. I heard his sharp intake of breath as he saw the body of a three-month old, dismembered by a D & C abortion. With great sadness in his voice he asked, 'Who broke the baby?' Here was a child too young to have his sight clouded by semantic subterfuge, and, with a wisdom that often escapes the learned, he could mentally assemble the body parts and call what he saw a broken baby."

Jean died December 23, 2016 at age 87. Her contributions of thought, time, and energy to the pro-life cause have been enormous. Rest in peace, Jean.

Nat Hentoff: Jewish, atheist, civil libertarian, left-wing pro-lifer

Nat was one of a kind, for sure. He died in December, 2016. We will miss his incredible intellectual grasp of issues and his sense of irony. In a 1992 article, he wrote about becoming pro-life and mentioned his tie with Rochester. You can enjoy it, too.

"... Nearly ten years ago I declared myself a pro-lifer. A Jewish, atheist, civil libertarian, left-wing pro-lifer. ... Not long after, I was invited to speak on this startling heresy at Nazareth College in Rochester (long since a secular institution). Two weeks before the lecture, it was canceled. The women on the lecture committee, I was told by the embarrassed professor who had asked me to come, had decided that there was a limit to the kind of speech the students could safely hear, and I was outside that limit. I was told, however, that I could come the next year to give a different talk. Even the women would very much like me to speak about one of my specialties, censorship in America. I went and was delighted to talk about censorship at Nazareth. ..."

New prenatal test identifies more genetic diseases

Children diagnosed prenatally with Down syndrome are at a hugely increased risk of abortion.

A new test, defined for single-gene disorders, may put many more children at risk. The FAST test is like the NIPT described in the last issue is non-invasive in that it analyzes the mother's blood. Possibly available in the next five years, it would identify conditions such as muscular dystrophy, Huntington's disease, sickle cell anemia, hemophilia, and cystic fibrosis. These conditions are caused by mutations within a single gene.

Some conditions can be treated in the womb, but for others, as in the case of Down syndrome, the advised treatment will indubitably be abortion.

American Psychiatric Association opposes ... what?

The APA released a position statement saying that they oppose prescribing or administering death-causing drugs to non-terminally ill people. In so doing, they specify a non-opposition to assisted suicide/euthanasia as long as the patient is considered terminally ill. They are basically opposing assisted suicide or euthanasia for psychiatric patients

However, spokesperson Dr. Mark Komrad, said, "So far, no other country that has implemented physician-assisted suicide has been able to constrain its application solely to the terminally ill, eventually including non-terminal patients as legally eligible as well. This is when psychiatric patients start to be included." As noted for Belgium and Holland, when you open the door to killing just a few sick people, the door just opens wider and wider. It makes you wonder what the APA thought it was accomplishing with their statement.

New head of the UN

The new secretary-general of the UN, Antonio Guterres, is a committed Catholic who opposed the legalization of abortion when he was prime minister of Portugal. It is hoped that with his influence the UN will become more family-oriented than it has been in many years.

Newly published book on Gosnell

Philadelphia abortionist Dr. Kermit Gosnell was convicted in 2013 in a trial that was noteworthy in at least two aspects: (1) The filth of his “clinic,” the disregard shown to the women who came there for abortions, and the number of viable babies he aborted and then killed and (2) the utter lack of interest shown by the media. The trial netted Gosnell three life sentences for the three babies and one adult he was charged with killing.

The husband and wife team of Phelim McAleer and Ann McElhinney have now written a book entitled “Gosnell: The Untold Story of America’s Most Prolific Serial Killer.”

It has been favorably rated by reviewers such as Michelle Malkin, Katie Pavlich, and David Daleiden. Commended for its accuracy, it points the finger of blame at the people in power who knew about the problem and chose to do nothing, people Michelle Malkin accurately terms “enablers.” Lawyers for Life in Buffalo heard some of the stories from the book when McElhinney spoke at their banquet in September, 2016.

McAleer and McElhinney also produced and co-wrote “Gosnell”, a feature film starring Dean Cain. It is due to be released in 2017.

Assisted suicide and euthanasia here and there

The Dutch government is considering allowing euthanasia to be extended to those who feel that they have “completed life.” Since these people would not necessarily be terminally ill or suffering unbearable pain, this represents yet another slip down the slippery slope.

www.telegraph.co.uk/news/2016/10/12/dutch-may-allow-assisted-suicide-for-those-who-feel-they-have-co/

The Netherlands allowed euthanasia for alcoholism in the case of Mark Langedijk, who had given up hope of being able to stop drinking. Since he was physically ill and suffering psychologically, he qualified.

www.mercatornet.com/careful/view/netherlands-offers-euthanasia-for-alcoholics/19066

A woman known as AG in New Jersey has now been cleared by a judge to commit long-term suicide by anorexia. The hospital must transfer her to a palliative care unit and continue to care for her, but are not allowed to force-feed her. Her lawyer, Edward G. D/Alessandro “says that she could still live for years from the minimal nutrition she gets via binging and purging; she otherwise consumes only diet soda and black coffee.”

Canadian euthanasia has taken another step in the province of Alberta, where doctors are not the only ones authorized to administer euthanasia. In Alberta, it can be done by nurse practitioners, who function for many patients as their primary care provider.

Swiss Bishop: No last rites if planning euthanasia

According to LifeSiteNews, Swiss Bishop Vitus Huonder said that if a Catholic is requesting euthanasia then that Catholic will not be able to receive the last rites. “While Huonder strongly urges his priests to accompany all persons in the last stages of life and to uphold the protection of the sick and the relief of pain, he explains that last rites are out of the question for those who choose death by euthanasia.”

Ohio makes assisting in a suicide a felony

Alex Schadenberg of the Euthanasia Prevention Coalition reported: “Great news: Yesterday, Ohio Governor Kasich signed Bill HB 470 making Ohio the fifth state in the past few years to strengthen protections in law from assisted suicide, a bill that makes assisted suicide a felony.”

The other four states are Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, and Arizona. Michigan, in response to the infamous Jack Kevorkian’s assistance in suicides, had passed an assisted suicide ban earlier, in 1998.

During the process of bill passage, State Senator Bill Seitz, author of the bill, commented, “...we ... are firmly against assisted suicide. And how can we prove it to you? We’re going to make it a felony of the third degree if you [help someone] do it.”

NY Times advocates VSED

A recent article in the NY Times spoke positively of the idea of suicide by VSED, the act of voluntarily stopping eating and drinking. It seemed to advocate VSED especially for older people who may have trouble coping with health/life issues, whether or not they are terminally ill.

Death by dehydration normally occurs somewhere within two weeks and usually requires what the Times called “aggressive” pain medication. Rochester’s assisted suicide advocate Dr. Timothy Quill said, “You want a medical partner to manage your symptoms. It’s harder than you think.”

Ethicist Wesley J. Smith, commenting on the article, said, “Geriatric depression is a terrible problem in our society. The last thing depressed oldsters need is a writer on aging issues pushing self-starvation as a splendid way out.”

www.nytimes.com/2016/10/25/health/voluntarily-stopping-eating-drinking.html?smid=tw-share&r=2

Assisted Suicide targets NY State

Many legislators do not understand the ramifications of legalizing assisted suicide. They feel that it is compassionate to give sick people the approval and support of our legal system to end their lives.

It is for this reason that the former Hemlock Society, now renamed Compassion & Choices, is targeting NY State for passage of a bill to legalize assisted suicide. On their website, they say, “Capitalizing on strong interest among lawmakers in Albany and brisk growth in our New York grassroots, Compassion & Choices has made New York a top legislative priority. We are committing significant resources to make medical aid in dying available to terminally ill adults in the Empire State.”

Not Dead Yet and other disability groups oppose legalizing assisted suicide.

Marilyn Golden, Disability Rights Education & Defense Fund, says, “If this bill passes, some people’s lives will be ended without their consent, through mistakes and abuse. No safeguards have ever been enacted or proposed that can prevent this outcome, which can never be undone.”

On their website, DREDF says, “Legalization is a serious mistake for many reasons that are not always immediately apparent. Supporters often focus solely on issues of choice and self-determination, but actually, legalization would restrict choice and self-determination.”

The New York Alliance Against Assisted Suicide points out that the “safeguards” are mere selling points to get the bills passed. They quote Wesley J. Smith: “safeguards” are the “honey to help make the hemlock go down.” In areas where assisted suicide/euthanasia is legal, safeguards are often disregarded.

New York State Reproductive Health Act

This is the same abortion expansion bill that has failed multiple times in the past. It passed (A1748) in the Assembly on Tuesday, January 17th by a 96 – 46 vote after a lightning-fast passage through the codes and rules committees earlier the same day. The Senate bill (S2796) is not likely to see action any time soon.

Washington “Women’s March”: only for certain women

A women’s march, to occur the day after the inauguration - sounds pretty inclusive, doesn’t it? When a pro-life feminist group applied to join the march, the initial responses were positive, even including the idea that feminism might include pro-lifers. However, the negatives swiftly rained down, and the organizers decided that, after all, one had to be in favor of abortion as a choice in order to be a feminist. In a Washington Post article, Carol Crossed explains that Susan B. Anthony was a feminist and definitely opposed abortion. However, as currently defined by the media, feminism and pro-life don’t go together. Yet.

www.washingtonpost.com/posteverything/wp/2017/01/18/susan-b-anthony-would-never-have-joined-the-womens-march-on-washington

Umbert the Unborn

by Gary Cangemi

Umbert is probably very grateful to those who voted in the last election. Individual citizen votes have started a process that just may remove the federal funding from a really big shark.

Suggested prayers

Please become a prayer partner. Spend 5-10 minutes daily in prayer about life issues to provide a 24-hour prayer shield over our area. Join in the following monthly prayer themes:

January: That our new President and Congress will honor the First Amendment and protect the rights of health care providers to follow their consciences especially as they care for women, infants, the disabled, and the elderly.

February: That our newly elected President learns to rely on the guidance of the Holy Spirit first in all things. May he be strong in protecting our religious freedoms.

March: That our culture moves from a “me” culture to one where others matter, especially the unborn, disabled, and elderly.

April: That newly appointed Supreme Court Justices revere all life, from womb to tomb.

May: That every woman may realize that sharing the act of creation with the Creator is a calling of the highest honor and every birth is a miracle.

In Memory

Hon. Jim Breese

Thanks to Friends

A big thank you to all the community leaders who generously allowed us to use their names on the special education solicitation letterhead you received in early January.

A few people gave us permission, but the permission didn't arrive until after the letter had gone to the printer. So, here are the people whose names were therefore not on the letter but who nevertheless responded with generous permission: Barbara Gutowski, Rev Robert Geyer, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Mooney, Suzanne and Michael Schnittman, Mr. and Mrs. John Englert, and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Webster.

Already started spring cleaning?

Don't forget the RARTL garage sale. We're expecting to reserve space soon for a long weekend in August at Annunciation Church, just like last year. So please save us your gently-used castoffs.

Do you need to move these items out of your house? Call Pat at 621-4690 to make arrangements.

A shout-out to the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which provides items like furniture and household goods to people who frequently have almost nothing. They generously donate some of their spare stock to our garage sale. Go, SVDP of northeast Rochester!

MEMORIAL/HONOR TRIBUTE You are welcome to remember an event/achievement or a deceased loved one with a memorial/honor/tribute, tax-deductible donation to the RARTL Education Fund. A card in your name will be sent to the family/person you designate; contribution amount is confidential.

Just a reminder

If you did not get a request for your membership back in October, the reason could be that you were in a select group of 400. For an unexplained reason, mailing labels were not generated for about 400 people when we were preparing the Membership solicitation in October. We do not know who these 400 people are and we are sorry!

We have now changed computer systems and do not expect that event to happen again.

The people you never see

Three cheers for the mailing crew at RARTL. These volunteers come in when we have a mailing. If we have envelopes, they stuff them and seal them. If it's a newsletter, they give it that one last fold, wafer it, and put your address label on it. It's not glamorous or exciting, so we're especially grateful to these volunteers who come back again and again. And again.

Saved from death and then from persecution in China

The past: Sentenced to death before birth by the Chinese Family Planning Police because she was a second child and, as a girl, not worth saving. Saved by courageous parents. Thrown into jail overnight without food, water, or a toilet at age 10 because the government was angry with her father, dissident Zhang Lin. Then kept under house arrest and prohibited from going to school.

The present: Rescued from China by Reggie Littlejohn, founder and driving force of Women's Rights Without Frontiers, Reggie's husband Robert, and US House Representative Chris Smith, who arranged for Anni and her sister to come to the US three years ago. Activists inside China also participated.

Anni has been adopted by Reggie and her husband. She began piano lessons after arriving in the US. The picture shows her, triumphant, after winning a music contest that rewarded the 13-year-old with the opportunity to play in Carnegie Hall. (Picture courtesy of Reggie.) Sometimes dreams really do come true.

Read more about Anni's story at www.breakpoint.org/bpcommentaries/entry/13/30337

It doesn't matter whether the Chinese law is a One-Child policy or a Two-Child policy. The government will still force abortions on women unlawfully pregnant and women will still be pressured into "voluntarily" discarding unborn daughters in hopes of having a son.

Women's Right's Without Frontiers has an ongoing program to save girl children in China from forced abortion. One of their programs gives a pregnant woman money to help her continue her pregnancy and take care of the newborn. Reggie is a tireless and riveting speaker. She spoke with students at the Break for Life here in Rochester several years ago and the students were enthralled.
